10/18/17	SGS t/c to	Informed Professor that a student raised some concerns about some comments he made in class. Informed him of his right to bring union representation, which he declined. Set appointment for 10/20/17.
10/20/17	meet with SGS & LB	SGS shared details of concerns raised from student. Meeting cut short due to SGS personal appointment. Scheduled to continue discussion on 10/23.
10/23/17	SGS meet	explained that she identifies as a woman, but she has black family members. And when she heard it, she was shaking. said she has been in Bellingham where people have called her racial slurs.
		She explained that they were talking abou He was explaining the racist incident that happened on the subway train. When a drunk man on NY subway was saying offensive racist things on the train and a Black woman threw soup in his face, and he said the N word. She said she thought the example could be used for good, but then he said out loud the N word.
		She said she immediately put her hand up, but he waited a good 3 – 5 minutes to call on her. She told him he shouldn't be saying the N word.
		He said he went to MLK elementary, and if you're not black you don't have to be saying that word. And then he said, "Thank you for calling me out on that." To it seemed to be to brush me off. He didn't apologize for using the N word.
		She said no other student said anything. She met with her group after class, and asked them, can you believe he said that. They said thank you for saying something.
		IF he wants to apologize, she would much more value him apologizing to the class because there are black students in the class. If she was so angry identifying as a Latino, she can only imagine what the black students have felt. She thinks he should make a sincere apology to them.
	tunity Office/WWU	She would like the university to do something about this. This is a professor who is most likely going to continue to teach here and teach freshman. He can use political examples, but in a way that is not offensive, whether it is training, whether it is disciplinary action. Maybe someone looking at his lectures and approving them first.

10/23/17	SGS met with	Professor explained that regarding the n-word, they had a discussion about a guy in NY got on a subway. He had watched the video that showed a white man who got on subway and used the N word.
		Professor thinks it's important to say the word. He explained that professor Cornell West talks about this and uses the word.
10/31/17	meets with SGS and LB	Professor students about the word's troublesome history. Furthermore, Professor wanted to help his students understand that the word has been appropriated currently by rap music which many students often listen to. Professor also talked about how other scholar's use of the n- word, and he believes it can be used as a powerful educational tool. LB and SGS explained to Professor that the use of that work in call can cause significant harm to his students, and asked if there were other ways he could educate his students without use the N-Word. After some reflection, Professor indicated that he does not plan to use the n-word during future lectures because of the significant harm it can cause his students. He expressed that he would consider using other words to educate his students.
